Θολό τοπίο οι σχέσεις της Αθήνας με τη Λιβύη

(04/06/25)

Η κυβέρνηση, ανατρέποντας την πολιτική που η ίδια εφάρμοζε επί πεντέμισι χρόνια, προχωρά στην υιοθέτηση της λεγόμενης «θετικής οικονομικής ατζέντας» με τη Λιβύη, χωρίς την παραμικρή δέσμευση της μεταβατικής Κυβέρνησης Εθνικής Ενότητας της Τρίπολης για μελλοντική κατάργηση (ή, τουλάχιστον, έναρξη αναθεώρησης) των Μνημονίων της με την Τουρκία.

Η κρίση εμπιστοσύνης ανάμεσα στην Ουάσιγκτον και την Άγκυρα επανέρχεται στο προσκήνιο, καθώς ΗΠΑ και Τουρκία δυσκολεύονται να συνεννοηθούν για το μέλλον της Συρίας και τη στήριξη προς τις κουρδικές δυνάμεις. Με φόντο την προοπτική μιας νέας περιφερειακής αναδιάταξης, η στάση των ΗΠΑ απέναντι στις Συριακές Δημοκρατικές Δυνάμεις (SDF) προκαλεί εκνευρισμό στην Άγκυρα, που ζητά ξεκάθαρα την άρση της αμερικανικής στήριξης, θεωρώντας την επέκταση του PKK.

Ukraine's Response To The Sejm's Volhynia Genocide Remembrance Bill Infuriated Poles

(08/06/2025)

All in all, Ukraine refuses to recognize the Volhynia Genocide since doing so would discredit its modern-day post-Maidan "national heroes" from the World War II era even more than they already are, so it's instead downplaying this crime and suggesting that Poles are Russia's useful idiots for remembering it. This is incredibly disrespectful and Poles are rightfully infuriated, which could easily galvanize the population in support of a much harder line towards Ukraine than anything that's come before.

America's Retreat Is Europe's Big Opportunity

Jun 3, 2025

In light of recent domestic and global developments, European policymakers increasingly see America's retreat as a chance for their own countries to catch up and thrive in the twenty-first-century economy. But to succeed, they will have to address four politically difficult questions that have long been swept under the rug.

How Important Was the Siberian Bomber Base Hit By Ukraine? Tu-22M3 Fleet Set to Recover

(03/06/25)

Following the successful initiation of Operation Spider Web by the Ukrainian SBU on the afternoon of June 1, which saw large scale done strikes launched from trucks within Russia against multiple major bomber bases, one of the most significant achievements of the operation was the unprecedented strike on the Belaya Airbase in the Irkutsk region, Siberia. Located more than 4000 kilometres from Ukraine, and approximately 300 kilometres from the Russian-Mongolian border, the ability to hold the airbase at risk served to highlight the limits of Russia's highly prized strategic depth, and raises the potential of major industrial facilities, such as the Irkutsk Aviation Plant where Su-30 fighters are built, could be targeted in future attacks. Belaya Airbase was built in the late 1940s to host interceptors for air defence duties under the 350th Fighter Aviation Regiment, as part of a broader effort to increase the security of Soviet airspace. The contraction of the tactical combat aviation fleet after the end of the Cold War, however, has meant that the facility currently hosts no combat jets other than Tu-22M3 bombers.

Ukraine Launches Drone Boat Attack on Heavily Defended Kerch Strait Bridge: Surveillance Equipment Compromised
(03/06/25)

On the afternoon of July 3 the Ukrainian Armed Forces launched an attack on the Kerch Strait Bridge connecting the disputed Crimean Peninsula to the Russian mainland using multiple unmanned boats. The operation successfully managed to cause an underwater explosion, although reportedly failing to hit any of the bridge supports, with the drone boats subsequently being neutralised by Russian forces using Lancet loitering munitions. The bridge's operations were not disrupted. Despite the failure of the attack, it was notable that Ukrainian intelligence was able to make full use of cameras across the bridge, indicating that they have likely been compromised by Ukrainian cyber warfare specialists. The Kerch Strait Bridge has long been made a target for Ukrainian attacks, with a successful bombing on October 8, 2022, taking it out of commission for several hours and causing three deaths, which was quickly commemorated in Kiev with a celebratory postage stamp. Russia responded to the attack by launching major missile strikes against multiple key Ukrainian infrastructure targets.

Key Takeaways:

- The Kremlin is fixating on recent train derailments in Russia in order to further long-standing Kremlin narratives claiming that Ukraine is an illegitimate negotiating partner that is uninterested in peace, likely to distract the broader information space from recent Kremlin officials' statements about Russia's own disinterest in a negotiated settlement.
- Putin also used his June 4 phone call with Trump to further falsely portray Ukraine as an illegitimate negotiating partner that is uninterested in peace.
- Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelensky continues to express Ukraine's willingness to negotiate with Russia to establish a just and lasting peace.
- Ukrainian and Western officials and open-source analysts continue to clarify the battlefield damage resulting from Ukraine's "Operation Spider's Web" long-range drone strike series against Russian air bases on June 1.
- Ukrainian special services reportedly used artificial intelligence (AI) to direct drones during Operation Spider's Web.
- Ukraine's Western allies continue to provide military aid to Ukraine.

- Ukrainian forces recently advanced near Pokrovsk. Russian forces recently advanced in Sumy Oblast and near Toretsk.

Ukraine's "Spider Web" Operation: Interview with Former NATO General on Strategic Implications and Reality Behind the Claims
(04/06/2025)

"The first question is whether the Americans were aware of the operation. From the perspective of battlefield developments and the conflict's evolution, this action is unlikely to alter the course of events in any significant way. However, regarding negotiations and Russia's expected concessions as demanded by Trump before his inauguration, the operation has an impact. Just before the Istanbul talks, Trump, perhaps frustrated by the negotiations' progress, stated that something very bad could happen to Putin or Russia if they didn't meet U.S. expectations. The fact that 'Spider Web' occurred a week later suggests it might be part of a plan the Americans knew about. There's no certainty, just striking coincidences."

"It's hard to believe the UK isn't somehow involved. The operation's methods, at least in its conception, likely exceed Ukraine's capabilities. A British influence is plausible, as seen in the Kursk operation. The use of Ukrainian saboteur teams in Russian territory isn't new—it's been ongoing since 2022-2023. Striking deep into Russian territory is an idea likely originating outside Kyiv, both in concept and execution. Even the drones that hit Moscow in recent months seem to launch from Russian territory, using civilian Russian infrastructure and communication systems, making them hard to detect. There's nothing distinctive to identify them."

Ukraine Launches its Most Successful Air Strike Ever: Russian Bomber and AEW&C Fleets Hit Hard at Home Bases

(02/06/25)

In the afternoon of June 1, Ukrainian forces launched a successful large scale drone strike on three major Russian Aerospace Forces facilities including Olenya in the Murmansk region, Dyagilevo in the Ryazan region, and the Belaya airbase in the Irkutsk region, Siberia. The ability to engage targets unprecedentedly deep inside Russia was achieved by launching aircraft from trucks deep inside Russian territory. The operation, codenamed "Spider Web," was reported by Ukrainian sources to have been planned for a year-and-a-half, and according to Western and Ukrainian sources has damaged and destroyed more than 40 military aircraft. Among the most valuable aircraft destroyed are Tu-95MS and Tu-22M3 strategic bombers, which are both classes of aircraft that have ceased production for more than two decades and are irreplaceable. At least four Tu-95MS bombers are confirmed to have been lost, with Ukrainian drones reported to have specifically targeted their underwing pylons where fuel and cruise missiles are carried. A-50 airborne early warning and control (AEW&C) systems, which are among the most costly aircraft fielded by the Russian Armed Forces, were also reported to have been destroyed. Shortly after videos emerged confirming the attack, the Russia 1 TV channel reported that President Vladimir Putin would hold meeting with government members and Security Council session.

Iskander Missile Strikes Take Out Ukrainian Drone Command Centres and HIMARS Launchers

(02/06/25)

On June 1 Russian Iskander-M tactical ballistic missile systems destroyed two Ukrainian Army HIMARS rocket artillery systems in the Sumy region. The Russian Defence Ministry reported regarding the attack: "Two HIMARS multiple launch rocket systems and their accompanying munitions were destroyed by a strike from an Iskander operational-tactical missile system in the Sumy region." Reports hours later revealed that Iskander-M systems had also successfully targeted Ukrainian mobile drone launch and control stations near the settlement of Krolevets in Sumy, with the Defence Ministry elaborating: "As a result of the missile strike, two vehicles equipped with mobile drone launch and control stations, along with their crews, were hit. Objective control systems also recorded fires among UAVs prepared for launch, followed by detonation of their warheads." Iskander-M systems were also reported to have targeted the position of long-range drone launchers in Chuguyev in the Kharkov region. The attack destroyed six drone launchers, eight vehicles, and around 30 single drones which had been prepared for launch, and were reportedly operated by far right paramilitary battalions rather than the regular armed forces.

Ukrainian Air Force Warns its New F-16s Are Far Outmatched By Russian Fighters and Air Defences

(04/06/25)

The Ukrainian Air Force has found its newly acquired F-16s to be far outmatched by Russian fighters and air defence systems, according to a statement by spokesman Yuri Ignat on June 3. "Unfortunately, today Russia has jets that see farther and missiles that fly farther. That's even when compared to F-16s. They also have powerful air defences, which work in tandem with aviation," he stated. His statement was made less than a month after the Air Force lost its third F-16, which was destroyed on May 16 during an engagement with Russian targets thought to be drones or cruise missiles. The preceding F-16 loss, announced on April 12, occurred deep inside Ukrainian controlled airspace, and was widely assessed by analysts to be the likely result of targeting by Russian ground-based air defence systems using a very long range 40N6 surface-to-air missile. Ukraine has been pledged 80 flightworthy F-16s as aid, including 30 from Belgium 24 from the Netherlands, 19 from Denmark, and 12 from Norway, with additional non-flightworthy airframes having been pledged by Norway and the United States to be cannibalised for spare parts. The first F-16s arrived in the country on August 1.

Lavrov Made Three Important Points About Russia's Military Diplomacy

Altogether, Lavrov made the following three important points about Russia's military diplomacy: 1) Russia ultimately isn't responsible for how its arms are used by its partners; 2) these same partners are free to purchase arms from whoever else they'd like (though doing so from anti-Russian countries raises eyebrows); and 3) Armenia rejected Russia's proposed compromise with Azerbaijan on Karabakh, which was predicated upon the mediation role that Moscow obtained through its military diplomacy with both.

It's in Russia's interests to amplify these aforementioned points in order to counter weaponized misportrayals thereof that are meant to discredit Russian policy by presenting it as an unreliable partner. This false perception is then exploited to help the American military-industrial complex make inroads at its Russian competitor's expense, which in this case takes the form of falsely legitimizing and consequently accelerating Armenia's pivot towards the US that threatens to destabilize the region.

Where are the new Israeli settlements in the West Bank?

Source:
OCHA, Peace Now

ISPI

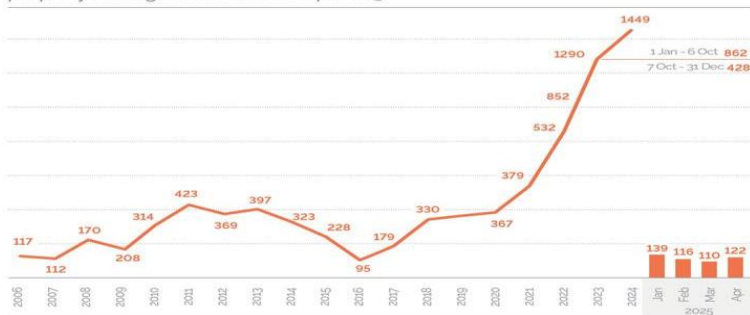

The settler movement endangers not just the Palestinians but Israel itself

"The Israeli government no longer hides its intentions. The decision to expand the settlements is a tangible indication that the annexation of the West Bank remains at the core of its objectives, even amid the ongoing war in Gaza. The fact that some of the most pro-settler figures in Israeli politics – namely Itamar Ben-Gvir and Bezalel Smotrich – now hold key positions in the government, with direct authority over West Bank-related matters, only accelerates this trajectory. Their influence has translated into increased state funding for settlement expansion and greater political protection for settlers, including those accused of violence against Palestinians, with administrative detention no longer perceived as an effective deterrent. However, these dynamics are deeply intertwined with Israel's growing internal fractures – from rising tensions between the Shin Bet and the government to the country's most existential question: what kind of state it aspires to become. As Israelis – and the world – focus on Gaza, the entrenchment of settler interests at the heart of government not only exacerbates the Israeli-Palestinian conflict but also reflects a broader erosion of the rule of law within Israel itself.”

India turning military mistakes into strategic strength

India's decision to publicly disclose tactical missteps in recent military engagements represents a calculated strategic pivot that challenges traditional notions of deterrence. At the Shangri-La Dialogue and subsequent defense forums, Indian military leaders revealed past errors in troop positioning and drone operations, actions typically kept behind closed doors.

Guided development: North Korean weapons break cover with Russian design features
(02/06/25)

North Korea has revealed mock-ups of air-to-air and air-to-surface weapons, leading to concern in South Korea that Russia may have provided technical support. If the systems are introduced into service, they could enhance North Korea's air-to-air combat capability.

Russian Army Captures Two of Ukraine's Last Abrams Tanks Intact: Why Were They Abandoned?

(05/06/25)

Two of the Ukrainian Army's last remaining M1A1 Abrams main battle tanks have been captured by the Russian Army near the frontlines in the Sumy region, with footage confirming that the vehicles were abandoned relatively intact. Personnel operating under the 22nd Motor Rifle Regiment captured the vehicles, after reconnaissance teams secured the area against drones and explosives, with a repair unit subsequently assigned to transport the vehicles to rear positions. Two MaxxPro armoured vehicles, one Stryker infantry fighting vehicle, and a Challenger armoured recovery vehicle, were also captured as part of the same operation. These successes were gained as the Russian Army has made considerable advances into Sumy, capturing multiple settlements, with orders from the Kremlin having been issued to establish a buffer zone in the area. The capture of two intact Abrams tanks has fuelled considerable speculation regarding why they may have been abandoned, with a possibility remaining that the vehicles broke down or ran out of fuel.
